

A LETTER FROM THE EDITORS-IN-CHIEF

Welcome to Volume 28, Issue 1 of the Harvard Negotiation Law Review. This issue of the journal is a collaboration with the Program on Negotiation (PON) in recognition of their 40th anniversary, which is in 2023. The Program on Negotiation is an interdisciplinary research center dedicated to improving the theory and practice of negotiation and dispute resolution. It is composed of a consortium of faculty, researchers, and students from Harvard University, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Tufts University, and other Boston-area schools.

This collaboration was conceptualized as a way to celebrate the Program on Negotiation's impact on practitioners, scholars, and students—both formal and informal—regarding dispute resolution and negotiation. The Program on Negotiation has helped to shape the way that all of the authors who contributed pieces to this issue of the journal think about these fields.

The articles in this issue, which are varied in style and focus, exhibit three different ways of engaging with the core questions and areas of focus on which the Program of Negotiation centers its programming and research. Our hope is that you will experience the articles in conversation with each other, as the Harvard Negotiation Law Review editors have done throughout the editing process.

With gratitude for your time and engagement,

Handwritten signatures of Valerie Gutmann and Austin Riddick in black ink. Valerie Gutmann's signature is on the left, and Austin Riddick's signature is on the right.

Valerie Gutmann & Austin Riddick
Editors-in-Chief, Harvard Negotiation Law Review